

Perkins Restaurant on Elm Road Rewards Honest Student

You are heading toward the exit of the building at the end of the school day. On the floor in front of you, there are some crumbled papers. As you look more closely, you discover there is also money in the form of bills. You glance to your left and to your right. There is no one around. What would you do?

What Neal Neuberger, a senior from Maplewood, enrolled in the Graphic Arts program, did is a matter of public record. He picked up the cash and returned it to the school office. He did not say to the secretary, "If no one claims it, can I have it." He said, "I found this money in the hallway. It does not belong to me." He turned around and left. End of story, well, not exactly.

Through clandestine methods, the TCTC discovered that apple pie is Neal's favorite dessert. After the Perkins Restaurant on Elm Road, learned of Neal's good deed, they baked him two pies as a reward for his honesty. One is for him, but the other one is for his parents. After all, they are Neal's most important teachers.

If you ever suffer the misfortune of losing an item of value, do not despair. There is always the chance that someone like Neal Neuberger will find it first.
